More incred-ulous was the finding that none of the public schools in the urban areas of Los Angeles, Chicago, Miami, Detroit, Cleveland, San Diego, Baltimore and even Washington, D. C. were determined to be persistently dangerous. These findings raise some major concerns. The finding in Los Angeles was particularly troubling with re-gard to Banning Senior High School near Los Angeles, because in the 2001-2002 school year it was the scene of 28 batteries, two as-saults with a deadly weapon and three sex offenses; and this year an 18-year-old student died of a head injury hours after a fistfight in the school parking lot, and a fellow student was charged with murder. But safety is not just a concern in our nations most metropolitan areas. In fact, last week a student brought a gun to Wheat Ridge High School in Colorado. All of us want to prevent another tragic situation like Columbine. It is essential that we accurately evalu-ate our schools before declaring they are not persistently dan-gerous. Today we have a wonderful opportunity to hear from leaders in the education policy, and I hope that we can determine where we are in the process of effectively implementing this provision and what steps we can take to better protect our students, better in-form our parents and improve the quality of the learning environ-ment for all students. I am here today to listen to our witnesses and learn what is being done at the state level to implement this provision and how its implementation is viewed by those this provision is intended to help. I would like to thank our distinguished witnesses for...
