Excerpt: . for the principa. account which your business calls into the most common use, may be carried to any extent you please. You might add to tie plans given in nos. 3 4, columns for Bills Payable, Bills Receivable, Interest, c. Expense, etc. etc. All of which may be so diversified as to have a very pretty appearance in an illustration, so is to give a favorable impression to the casual observer. DIFFERENT PLANS FOR KEEPING THE LEGER There are different plans for keeping a Leger from thai laid down in part first if this work. Old fashioned accountants even now snake use of the words To and By; always Debiting an account to another account or sundries, and Crediting fly an account or sundries. Others omit writing the account which forms the balance for each sum throughout their Leger, retaining nothing but the dates and amounts. This plan gives the Leger a very clean and beautiful appearance, and may answer well with extensive dealers and commission merchants. Some omit these balances in their Representative accounts, and retain them in their Personal accounts, etc.--Others keep nothing but a Leger, and enter each article sold directly upon it. I have found this latter plan answer well at a manufacturing establishment, to confine those accounts of the hands who were daily purchasing frivolous amounts. By this plan we always had on hand a bill in detail of all articles they had purchased. You will find it to...
