Gertrude Atherton has restored to us Spanish California, the vanished Latin civilization in America, in her two splendid stories Rezanov and The Doomswoman, now republished under the title Before the Gringo Came. 1 Rezanov is the romance of a Russian soldier of fortune who dreamed of a mighty empire on the Pacific. The Doomswoman brings us a wonderful heroine, beautiful Chonita Iturbi y Moncada, the ill-starred girl of noble birth, whose love for Diego Estenga, the scion of a rival house, brings her great romance at the price of inevitable tragedy. Fifteen years ago several young women went into the moonshine region of the Kentucky mountains and spent successive summers instructing the mountaineers in simple medicine and hygiene, singing, sewing, kindergarten...
